The high performance organization

The high performance organization

The high performance organization (HPO) is a conceptual framework for organizations that leads to improved, sustainable organizational performance. It is an alternative model to the bureaucratic model known as Taylorism. There is not a clear definition of the high performance organization, but research shows that organizations that fit this model all hold a common set of characteristics. Chief among these is the ability to recognize the need to adapt to the surroundings that the organization operates in. High performance organizations can quickly and efficiently change their operating structure and practices to meet needs. These organizations focus on long term success while delivering on actionable short term goals. These organizations are flexible, customer focused, and able to work highly effectively in teams. The culture and management of these organizations support flatter hierarchies, teamwork, diversity, and adaptability to the environment which are all of paramount success to this type of organization. Compared to other organizations, high performance organizations spend much more time on continuously improving their core capabilities and invest in their workforce, leading to increased growth and performance.¹ High performance organizations are sometimes labeled as high commitment organizations.

.. with high degree of transparency

Focus on long term success while delivering on actionable short term goals

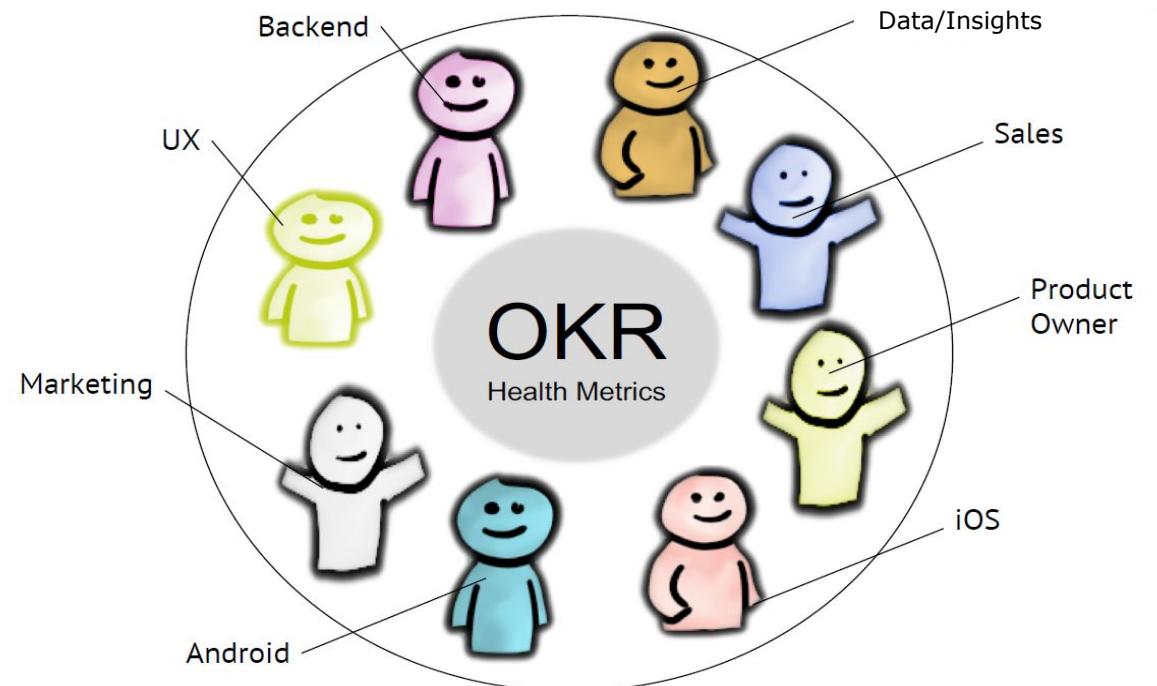

Transparency

We installed autonomous teams

We started with teams especially around Yearly Goals:

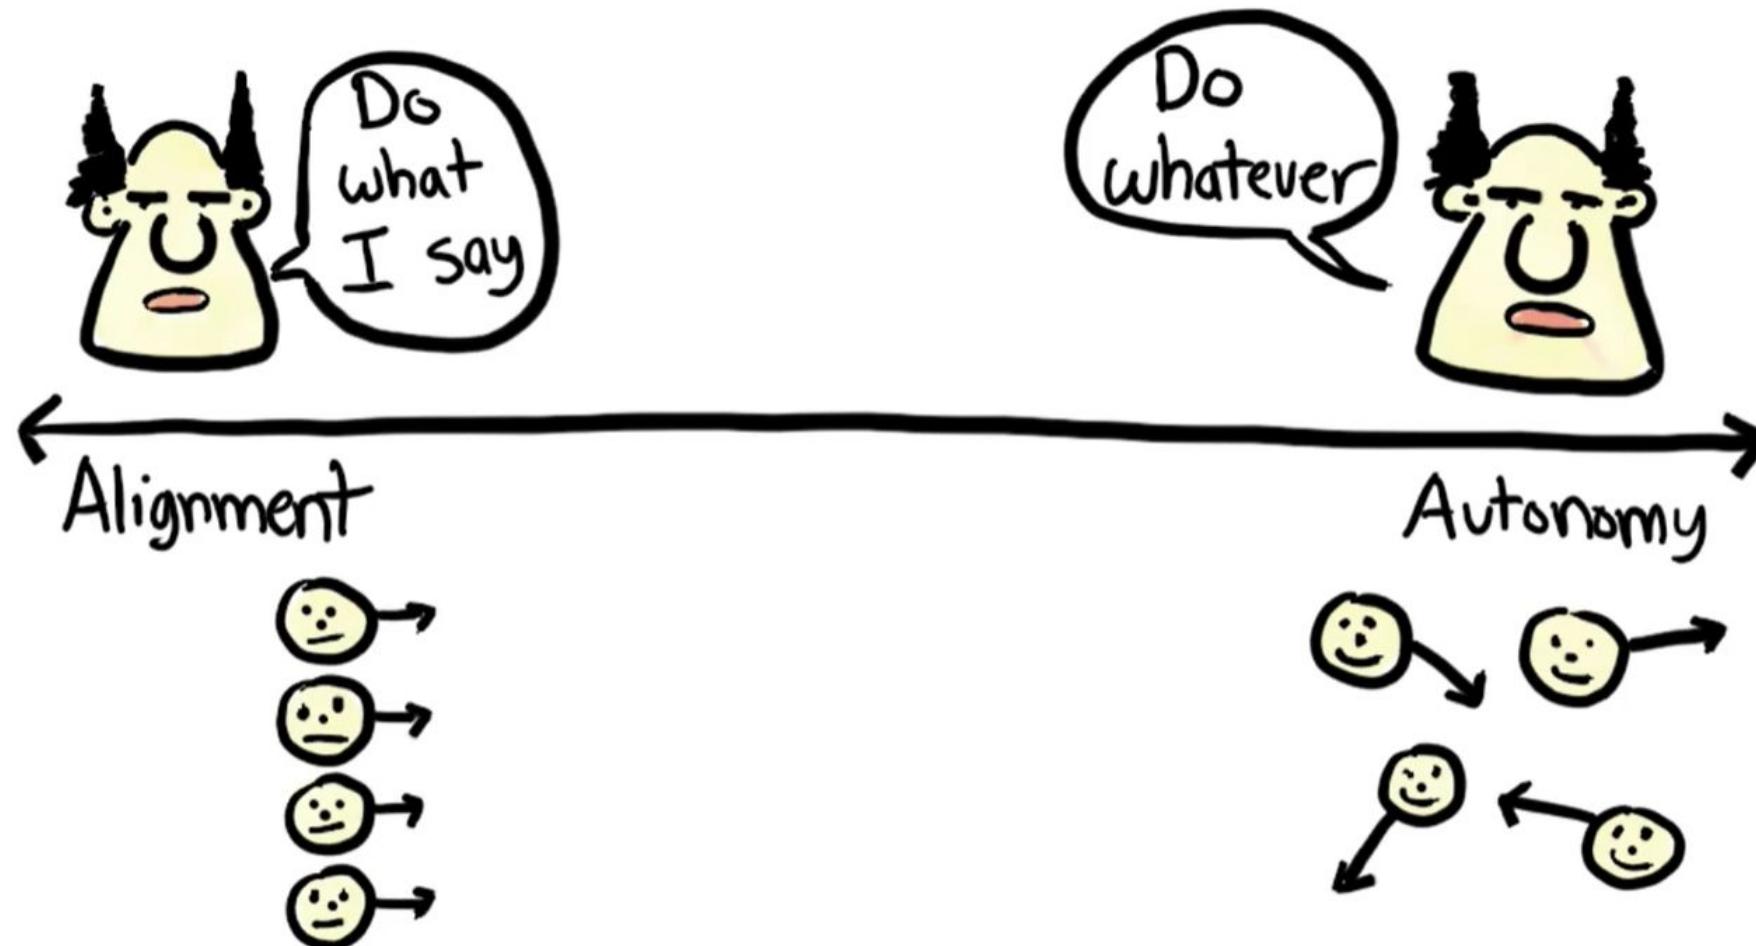

“PACE Team”

- works together on a common goal
- unites many different perspectives
- has an end-2-end responsibility
- it is cross-functional
- self-organizing

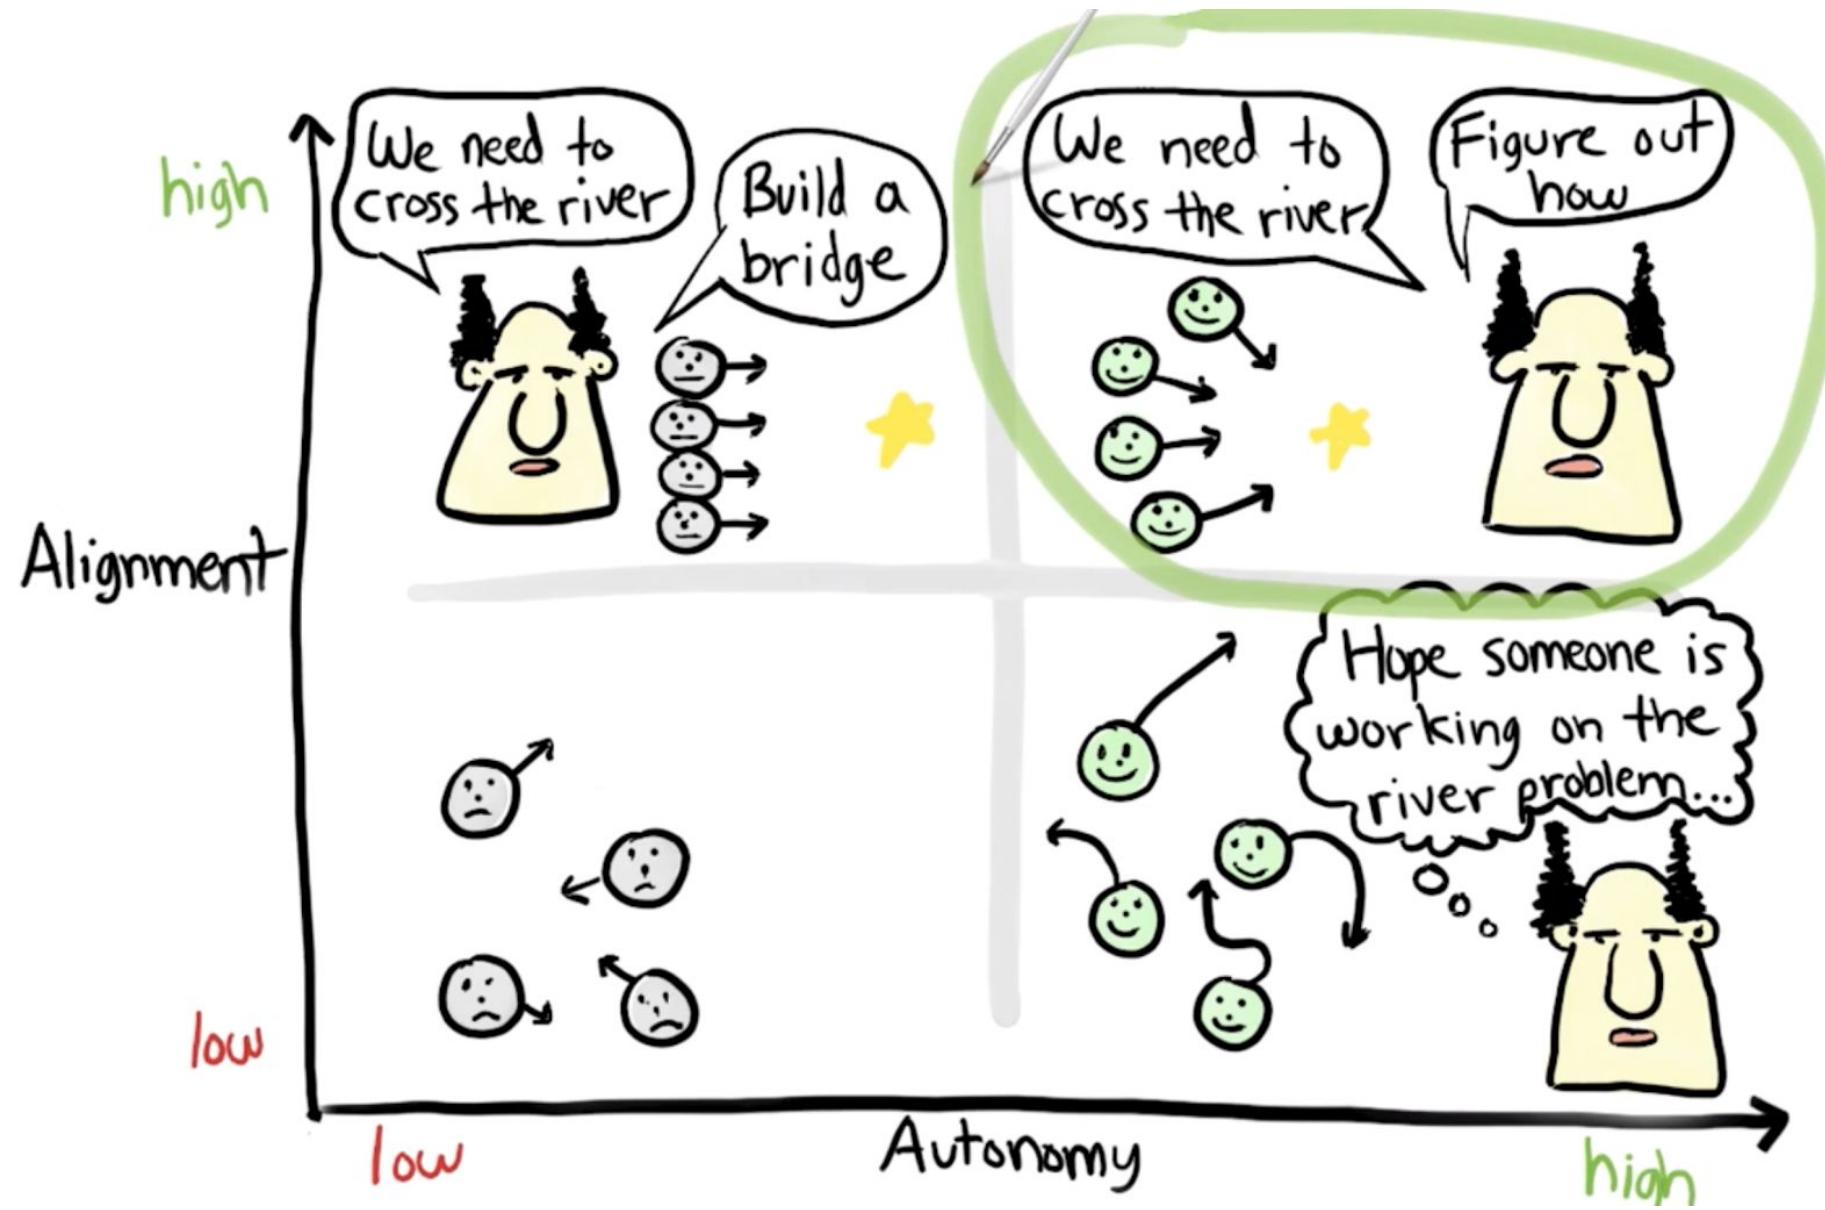

... roll-out of teams with end-2-end responsibility is ongoing

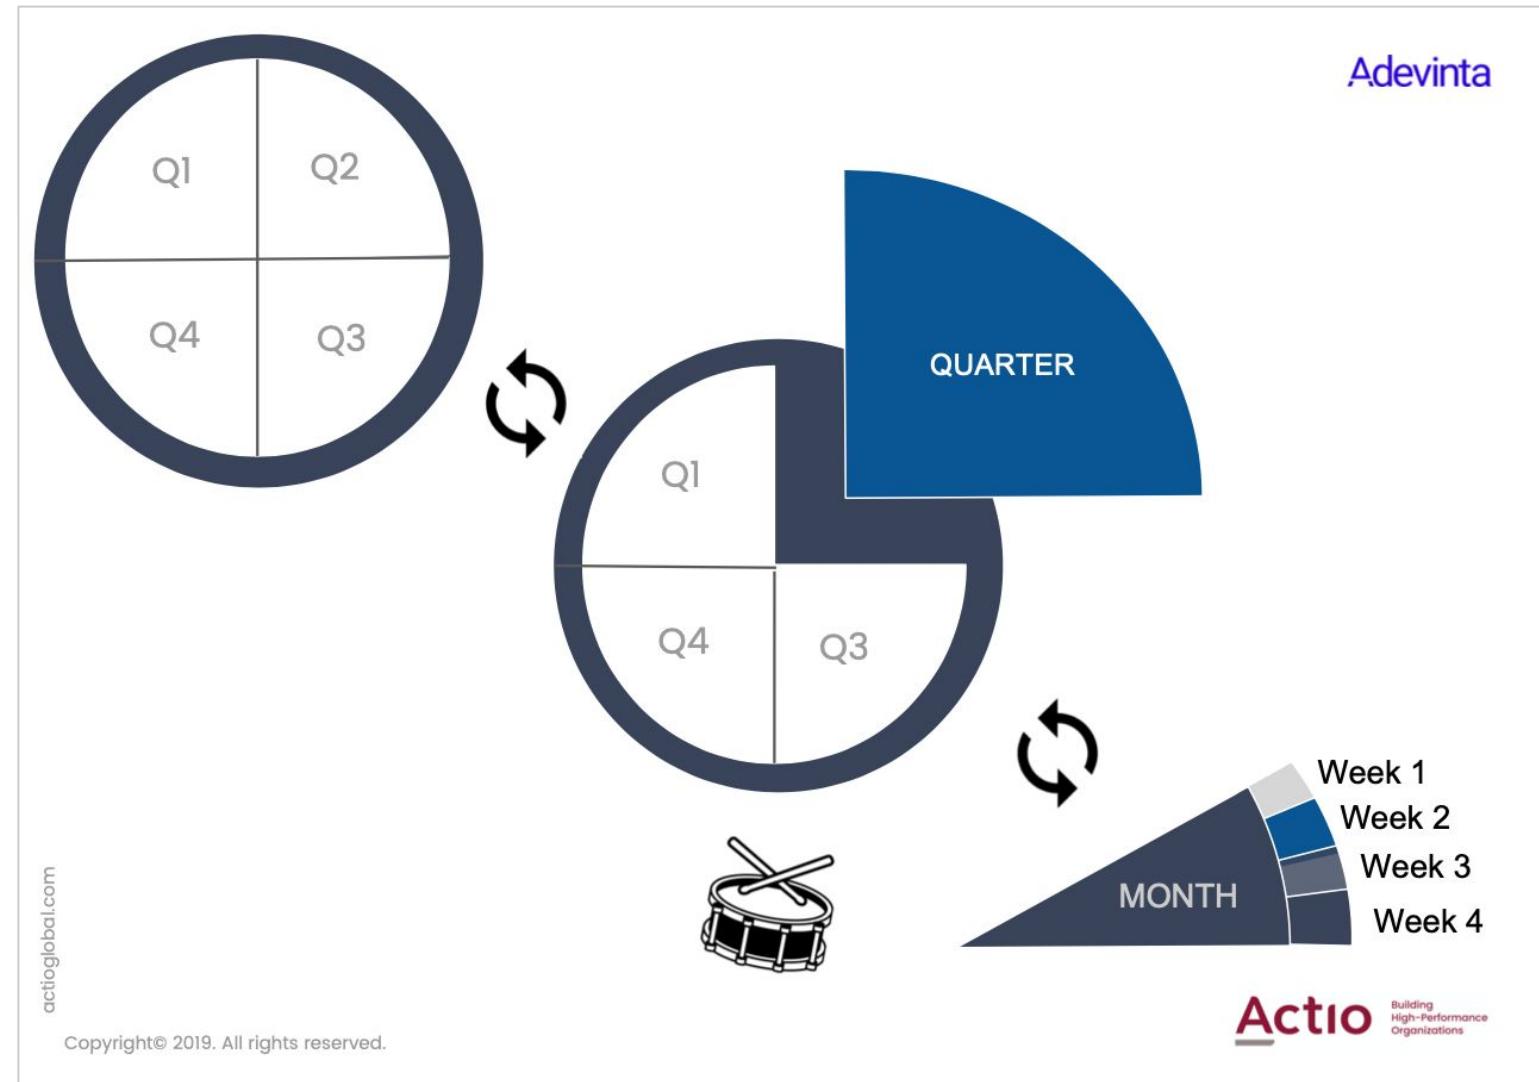

Autonomous teams - aligned with strategy?

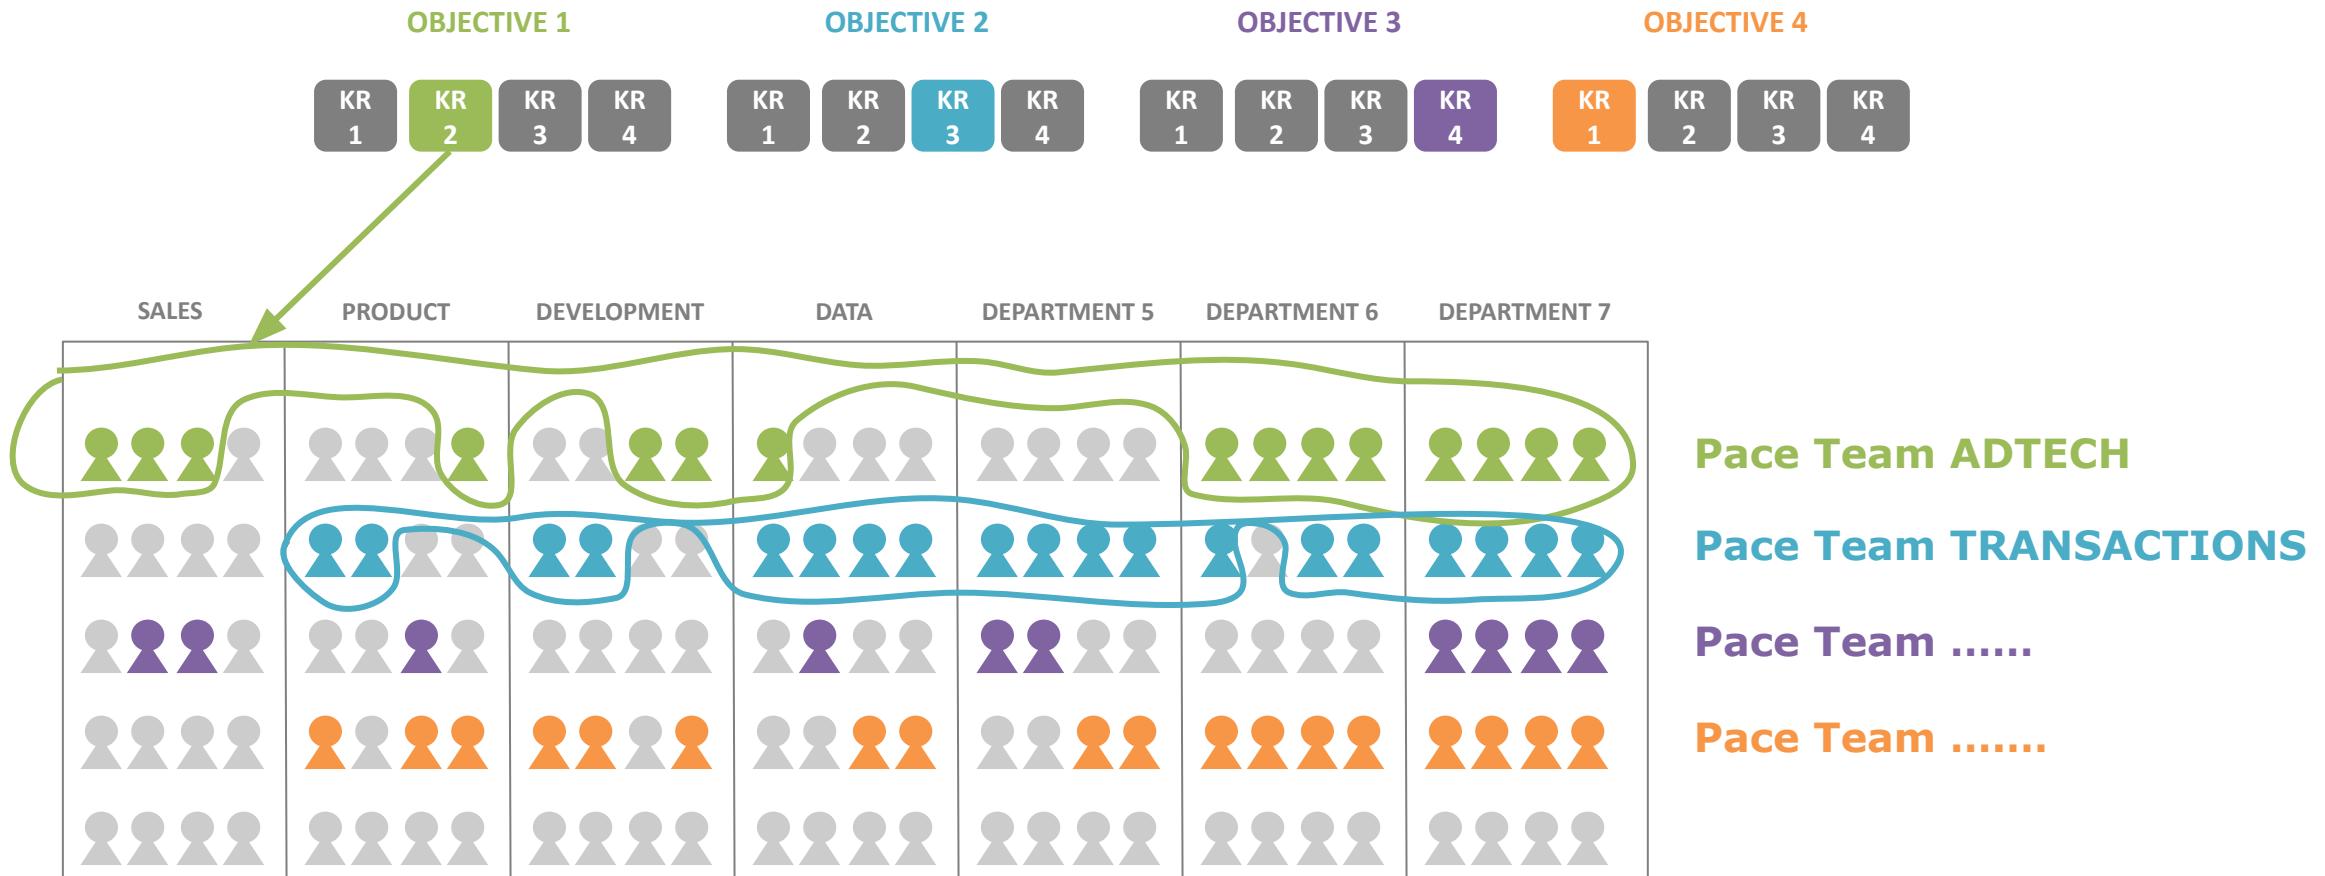

Alignment enables autonomy

Responsiveness is key - we can adapt when needed while also sticking to plans

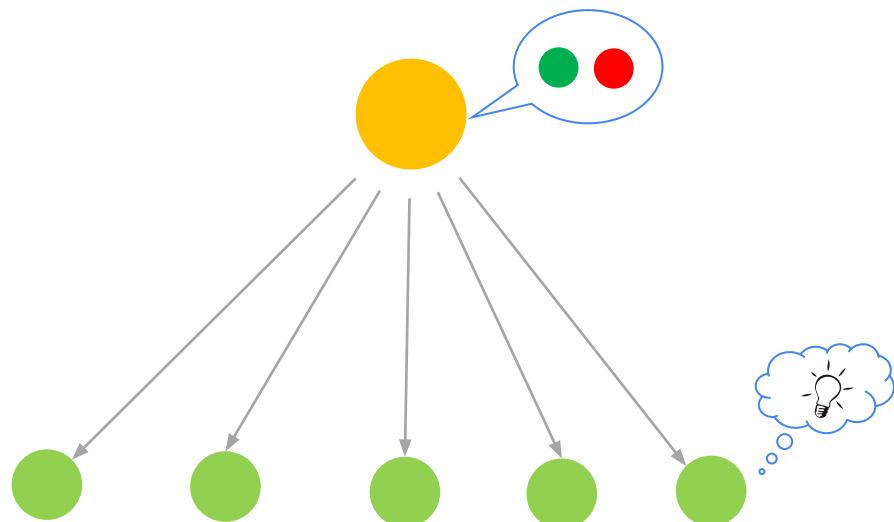

Responsiveness is key - we rally behind goals
