Some news that makes it worth opening the paper.
And at last ... it's over, this campaign which at times seemed like an endless state of Purgatory.

"I read the news today oh, boy ..." (Lennon / McCartney, "A Day in the Life.")
But in this case, the news is not "rather sad".

Tears & Cheers

by georgia10

Tue Nov 04, 2008 at 08:11:44 PM PST

Grant Park is going insane. The moment CNN projected the winner, cheers exploded into the air and Democrats, exhausted after an eight year long nightmare, collapsed into each other's arms. Tears are everywhere here. The smiles are bright enough to light up the entire city. And above all else, there is a sense that this moment, this remarkable moment, is long overdue. Our long national nightmare, as so many have said here tonight, is over.

Transforming politics

Obama raised $579,178,033 from individuals, about half donating under $200

When faced with impossible odds, generations of Americans have responded with a simple creed that sums up the spirit of a people: Yes we can.

This campaign is about building a different kind of politics. We don't take money from Washington lobbyists or special-interest political action committees. Instead, our broad base of individual donors ensures that this campaign answers to no one but the people.

That starts with you. Make your donation using the secure form below:

Internet Now Major Source of Campaign News

From our colleagues at the Pew Research Center for the People & the Press:

Many more Americans are turning to the internet for campaign news this year as the web becomes a key source of election news. Television remains the dominant source, but the percent who say they get most of their campaign news from the internet has tripled since October 2004 (from 10% then to 33% now).

While use of the web has seen considerable growth, the percentage of Americans relying on TV and newspapers for campaign news has remained relatively flat since 2004. The internet now rivals newspapers as a main source for campaign news. And with so much interest in the election next week, the public's use of the internet as a campaign news source is up even since the primaries earlier this year. In March, 26% cited the internet as a main source for election news, while the percentages citing television and newspapers remain largely unchanged.

Participative video

On a typical day, 15% of all online Americans use YouTube, nearly double the number in 2007

The image is a screenshot of the YouTube homepage. At the top, the YouTube logo and the tagline "Broadcast Yourself™" are visible. The navigation bar includes "Home", "Videos" (which is the active tab), "Channels", and "Community". Below the navigation bar is a search bar with the text "Videos" and a dropdown menu, followed by a "Search" button and an "advanced" link. To the right of the search bar is a yellow "Upload" button. The main content area features a section for "Promoted Videos" with four thumbnail images and their titles: "A D-III PARTY" (CBS), "Stop Motion Rubik's..." (S8M3G), "Vegas BASE jump wit..." (redbullusa), and "Vloglovers returns ... vloglovers". Below this is a "Featured Videos" section with a "Featured" tab and links to "Most Viewed", "Most Discussed", and "Top Favorites". The first featured video is "SwashBot 1", which shows a 3-legged robot. The video has 94,489 views, a 4-star rating, and a duration of 03:23. It is categorized under "Science & Technology". The second featured video is "Honda ASIMO Conducts The Detroit Symphony Orchestra", showing ASIMO conducting an orchestra. This video has 31,294 views, a 4-star rating, and a duration of 03:16. The "What's New" section on the right highlights "New Address Book" (organizing YouTube friends and contacts), "Updated Inbox" (managing messages and invites), "YouTube Mobile" (watching and uploading videos on mobile), and "Trendspotting Tuesday: Robots are Like Kittens for Nerds" (a weekly trendspotting feature).
